House

DESCRIPTION

Two storey brick house in modern movement or Inter-War Functionalist styling, with brick parapet concealing hipped terracotta tiled roof. Brick chimneys and simple brick string course to base of parapet. Windows are metal framed and the house features metal framed corner windows and a balcony with brick balustrade to the upper level.

HISTORY

This house was apparently built in 1937.

The designer of the house attempted to find architectural expression solely from the necessary tectonic forms, in keeping with the European modern movement. Its form is clean and direct, but to achieve this effect the traditional hipped roof had to be hidden behind the continuous parapet wall. The metal flat roof was not in use at that time. (Mitcham Heritage Survey).

STATEMENT OF HERITAGE VALUE

An excellent example of Australian modern domestic architecture which caused quite a stir in its time.
