Random coursed stonework with rendered side walls, brick quoins and dressed stonework surrounds. Hipped corrugated galvanised iron roof with stone parapet wall and brick chimneys. Bullnosed verandah with simple timber posts and old cast iron lacework. Double hung sash windows and sidelights and fanlights to door.

Historical Summary:

Designed by architects English and Soward it was built as one storey 15 room hotel. Has been used as Postal Office, for church services and District Council meetings. The second storey was added in circa 1907 by Edward Wardle Speed who bought it in 1897. The hotel is the site where four Aborigines were buried after being hanged for the murder of a white man in 1855.

Significance:

The earliest hotel to be built in this part of the Eyre Peninsula.

Description:

Rendered limestone walls and quoins with hipped corrugated galvanised iron roof and brick chimneys. Raked verandah with simple timber posts. Multi-paned double hung sash windows and fanlight. White picket fence along front boundary.

Historical Summary:

Built by the S.A. Government in 1885-6 of limestone as four rooms. In 1910 a new room was added to left hand side which became the Post Office until the present one was built in 1913. Until 1968, it was used as a residence. A new room was added in May, 1963 by Mr. McDonald of Peterborough. It is now used by the National Trust as a museum.

Significance:

Built by the S.A. Government during a period when post offices and police stations appeared to be constructed from the same design.

Attached shops with timber and glass fronts, random rubble side walls and brick quoins. Hipped corrugated galvanised iron roof with gablet and brick chimneys. Metal parapet verandah with simple timber posts and decorated with old cast iron lace. Double hung sash windows and fanlight.

Historical Summary:

One shop was used as a grocer, dress and material shop. The other shop was used as a barber's shop and billiard room. There were three billiard tables and it was a popular spot.

Significance:

They are historically linked to the period when the town was a thriving port and there was a need for wheat buyers to be based in the town.

Corrugated galvanised iron building with timber surrounds to windows and doors. Hipped corrugated galvanised iron roof with brick chimney. Roof extends to convex verandah supported by timber posts. Modern windows.

Historical Summary:

A Dr. Marshall, with his own funds, had built the small cottage hospital which became a duty nurses' quarters when the second hospital was built in 1911. It is possible that A.R. Ramsey built it, as he built a house for Dr. Marshall at the same time.

Significance:

Built at a time when towns such as Streaky Bay, Tumby Bay and Penong were demanding their own medical facilities.

Description:

Random rubble stonework church with brick quoins. Corrugated galvanised iron gable ended roof with gablet. Gothic windows (ecclesiastical). Extension to rear.

Historical Summary:

Foundation stone laid October, 1908, by James Cleave. Opened April, 1910, by Archdeacon Samwell. When the Archdeacon had been to Lincoln, England, previous to laying of foundation stone he had been presented with a carved capitol, of pillar from St. Hugh's Cathedral which dates back to A.D. 1210 and was being restored at the time of his visit. The pillar was placed in the sanctuary of St. Hugh's, Cowell and served as a Creedence table.

Significance:

According to David Hilliard, it was not unusual for Anglican churches of this period or earlier, to have a piece from a church of the mother country installed into the new church.

Description:

Timber pile jetty with earth embankment.

Historical Summary:

The first active steps towards securing a jetty were taken at a meeting held at Miller's Point store in January, 1880. It was built in two sections. By 1883 it was reported to be 300 ft long, in wood but at low tide the depth below jetty was only 6ft. It also had rails that ran along the jetty.

Significance:

Built at a period when, after closer settlement, a jetty was seen as vital for the area's economical progress.

Corrugated galvanised iron building with timber surrounds. Gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof with bargeboards and finials. Corrugated galvanised iron lean-to at side and double hung sash windows. Building lined with baltic pine.

Historical Summary:

Situated in isolated spot, it was of much significance to the community who used the hall for dances and other forms of recreation and even a church school. The tennis courts alongside, long overgrown were also once lovingly cared for. Courts and hall are no longer used.

Significance:

Associated to a period before television and good transport, when rural folk placed much importance on the local hall and the entertainment to be had there.

Raked corrugated galvanised iron roof supported on timber posts. The timber in this structure is riddled with white ants and is very unstable.

Historical Summary:

Built to provide water for travelling stock from Kimba to Cowell. Located on isolated heavily timbered hilltop.

Significance:

Historically important because it is an example of an early conservation stock route tank. The South Australian Government from the mid 1880s took on the responsibility to provide water for stock along South Australia's ten main stock routes.

Roy Jacobs thinks it was built by joint cooperation of farmers in the district and was last used in 1960's.

Significance:

An example of community cooperation to provide what the local population considered an important necessity.

Description:

Random rubble stonework church with brick quoins and brick decoration on front elevation. Gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof with bargeboards. Ecclesiastical windows. Also had wooden double sliding doors at front and an obvious sloping wooden floor.

Historical Summary:

Reputed to be the second church. The foundation stone was laid by Mrs. G. Wheeler 28th September, 1909.

Significance:

One of the many simple box-like churches which were built after closer settlement but became obsolete when the combustion engine made it just as quick to travel into townships.

Description:

Historical Summary:

When the jetty was built there was a need to blast a cutting to link the jetty to the higher shoreline behind. The jetty, now only approx 200ft was reputed to be about 400ft long and cost around £10,000. The railway sleepers half buried into the ground are all that remain of the jetty railway line.

Description:

Series of four reinforced concrete bomb shelters, two with towers and two without.

Historical Summary:

It is possible they were linked up to Hummock Hill gun emplacements, constructed to protect BHP's operations in Whyalla. At this time also, BHP had been commissioned to build patrol boats for the Royal Australian Navy.

Significance:

Part of South Australia's defence network to protect its important mining and shipbuilding operation from enemy attack.

Description:

Random rubble stonework tank built 3 feet out of the ground.

Historical Summary:

A Mr. Elliott used to supervise and keep tank for passing stock. Built in the days of Cobb & Co. run from Port Augusta to Port Lincoln. Cowell was bypassed as it was not established and there was no permanent water supply. Rather than go up to Minbury Spring(s) the Government had a pipeline put in to carry water to a cement tank.

Description:

Random rubble stonework ruin, formerly with gable ended roof.

Historical Summary:

No details other than it probably closed down during the Second World War.

Significance:

It epitomises the many tiny schools dotted around the landscape which became obsolete as a result of good transport.
