Description: Random coursed stone building with hipped corrugated galvanised iron roof and gablet. Stone chimneys. Raked return verandah on simple timber posts. Random coursed stone porch. Double hung sash windows.

Historical Summary:
Kimba's first station was a tent. The gaol which was portable came from Cleve. The stone for the present building is reputed to be Port Lincoln Duck Pond stone which "is so soft that you can carve it with a pocket knife. After a time, it will harden on the outside and become waterproof". The contractor for this building also contracted the post office.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE
Description:
Earth dam with concrete spillway.

Historical Summary:
Completed in 1913 as a 300,000 gallon capacity reservoir. “There was a pumping outfit (engine and pump foundations are still there) to pump the water from the dam to the Bunora Siding. They had overhead tanks at Bunora Siding, on the loop, and every second day a train picked up water and took it to the railway construction camp”.

Significance:
It provided vital water for construction workers involved in building the railway to Buckleboo.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Description: Random rubble stone foundations and stone cairn.

Historical Summary:
A plaque on the site reads "This cairn marks the site of the first public building in the Kimba district, the Kelly Hall (1917 - 1959) and the Kelly School (1918 - 1949). The old weatherboard hall which was originally the McMillens showrooms in Cowell, was bought for £100 and transported to the Kimba district."

Significance:
It was the venue of early entertainment in the district and a school.
