Description:

Timber pylons.

Historical Summary:

This was built about 8 years before the jetty, by William McKenzie. At low tide stores were ferried to and from the sailing ships by wagon.

Significance:

Privately built, it served the purpose of a much needed jetty which the South Australian Government constructed in 1910.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Recommendation: Local

Description:

Jetty with timber pylons.

Historical Summary:

It is believed that the first pile for the jetty was driven in by a Miss Myers. It has had approximately 300 feet removed from the end of the jetty. It was built at a cost of £8,354 and was opened for trade in 1910.

Significance:

It was the first jetty in the area and Denial Bay township became the main urban centre because of it. Its decline came about when the railway reached Murat Bay, when the newly proclaimed township of Ceduna then took trade away from Denial Bay.

Historical Summary:

It is believed that the local post office for the area was first at McKenzie's place, but when Denial Bay was proclaimed, the service moved there.

Significance:

Reputed to be the oldest place left in Denial Bay.

Description:

Random rubble stonework walls.

Historical Summary:

Mr. William McKenzie who lived on his opposite property, was the station's policeman.

Significance:

Its significance lies in the fact that the police station was located at a centre of population. McKenzie's property was reputed to have had a population large enough to warrant one.

Description:

Random rubble stonework walling.

Historical Summary:

William McKenzie was born in Macclesfield in 1843 and took up 17,800 acres at Denial Bay in 1884. On a plaque nearby is eulogised that 'Mac' was a blacksmith, builder, harbour master and J.P. His slogan was "You can't grow wheat with your hands in your pockets". When he died, his property was divided into 11 farms.

Significance:

The remains of a property that was more like a village, having post office facilities, police station and a saddler's. The station was affectionately known as "Mac's Town".

Description:

Random coursed stonework church with rendered surrounds. Gable ended roof clad with corrugated galvanised iron. Older section of random rubble stonework with corrugated galvanised iron roof. Ecclesiastical windows. Rendered besser block porch is later addition.

Historical Summary:

The first part of the church is believed to be around 1896, when checking dates on the nearby tombstones, with the biggest section being built in 1920, according to the foundation stone. It was the first Lutheran church in the area.

Significance:

Built, because of a significant number of German Lutheran families in the area.

Description:

Tank with rendered splayed internal walls with divided sections.

Historical Summary:

Interesting in that a lot of Government money was spent constructing it with between 20 and 30 men. Because of a design fault in the way the dividing walls were constructed, the tank did not function properly and collapsed by 1919, possibly due to wombat activity known to be in the vicinity.

Description:

Asymmetrical villa style house with coursed block walls and vermiculated quoins. Gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof with stone chimneys and decorated with bargeboards, finials and half timbering. Formerly had a verandah. Split paned double hung sash windows, sidelights and fanlight.

Historical Summary:

The cement blocks for this house were made by Mr. Talbot on the beach with beach sand and sea water. He created his own distinctive decoration for the moulds for the concrete blocks and there are a few other houses in the district using the same type of moulded blocks.

Description:

Stone fireplaces and remains of crude timber yards.

Historical Summary:

This camp site is a 'good day's camel journey' from Ceduna. Each camel team using this site built their own fireplace for their exclusive use. The camel trains were used between Ceduna and outlying stations as the main mode of transportation.

Significance:

It was the only known camel station that was seen in the region that the survey covered.

Description:

Random coursed stone building. Hipped and gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof with bargeboards and finials. Rendered chimneys. Split-paned double hung sash windows. Random rubble stone lean-to.

Historical Summary:

Built by Lloyd and Arnel who lived on St. Peters Island, it was one of the first structures in Ceduna. It ceased to be a police station, according to W. Moreland, in 1920.

Significance:

The police station was relocated from McKenzie's property near Denial Bay, after Ceduna was proclaimed a town.

Description:

Random rubble stone tank and trough. Two wells adjacent.

Historical Summary:

The field books of the Lands Department show that there was a survey of this area in 1895. For this property reference is made to four tanks and troughs in the vicinity. According to local sources one is believed to have been in existence around 1872. In 1916 in the vicinity a 200,000 gallon tank was built for £2,126.

Significance:

Of importance to the local residents who believe it to be an early well in the area.

Description:

Random rubble stonework hut with gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof and stone chimney. Convex verandah with simple timber posts. Double hung sash windows. Random rubble stone addition.

Historical Summary:

The date is uncertain but it could be between 1860 - 1880. It is reputed that the hut was used as a house and post office by the Bowells in the early 1900s when the fortnightly mail run was started. It was also a depot for a change-over of horses. The original pastoral plan of the area shows that Messrs Dalwood and Goode occupied the land in 1859.

Significance:

It is possible that the hut is a survivor of the early pastoral leases for the area.

Random rubble stone building with gable ended corrugated galvanised iron roof. Brush shed adjacent.

Historical Summary:

Built by Ted Glue, who was a swaggie passing through the area. He asked for a job at the Schwarz's farm and was asked to build a stable. Apparently he stopped 18 months to do the job but left it unfinished when he went off to the war. It then had to be completed by Mr. Schwarz himself.

Description:

Asymmetrical random rubble stonework villa with hipped roof clad with corrugated galvanised iron. Brick chimney. Bullnosed verandah with turned timber posts and old cast iron lace. Double hung sash windows. Lean-to at rear.

Historical Summary:

It is believed that the McInerneys were the first to live in the house, followed by Danny Malony. Has been called "Starvation Gully" by shearers in Malony's time, because he never fed his shearers very well.

Significance:

It is a Dick Wiese house. He was a very respected and well known builder in the area and is responsible for several well known homes in the area.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Description:

APPROXIMATE AREA: 251 hectares.

TOPOGRAPHY: tidal samphire flats and mangrove swamps contrast with the exposed coastline of rock pools and sandy coves. Behind the coastline sand dunes are formed and beyond them there is an undulating plain with bushland.

FLORA: among the types of plants that grow in the area there are yorrells; red, white and Kingscotes mallee; bluebush and bladder saltbush.

FAUNA: western grey kangaroos inhabit the park along with 75 species of birds including white-breasted sea eagles; ospreys; sacred kingfishers and rainbow bee-eaters.

HISTORY: a site was established on the headland in the early 1900s to allow bagged grain to be loaded onto ketches. Although remains of the timber loading platform no longer exist there is evidence on the road to Sandy Cove of an underground tank and stone-lined gutters, which was built in 1914 to provide water in times of drought.
