HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

The farm was purchased from the Traeger family c.1900 by Carl W. Thiele, father of Colin Thiele. Colin Thiele is one of the most prolific, versatile and widely read of modern Australian writers. He was born in Eudunda in 1920 and spent his childhood at this family home near Julia.

Several of Thiele's novels and other publications draw on his childhood experiences in this locality, with particular reference to the German farming community which included his own family.

DOCKET No.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Thomas Playford's Government gave the district a grant to help eradicate the rabbit pest, probably during his term as Commissioner of Crown Lands in 1892. No doubt the canning factory also provided crucial employment at a time of widespread depression.

The building was already in ruins by 1925 and only two walls now remain. The site still contains a waterhole with the remains of the factory's water supply system and the floors and rubble of several workmen's huts. An embankment on the site is believed to have been used as an amphitheatre for a travelling circus to entertain the workers.

The whole site and structural remains are of high archaeological interest and a rare relic of this unique industry.

Former or other

Office Use
ITEM No.
DOCKET No.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

This waterhole was a watering place for stock being over-landed to Adelaide and Kapunda from the east. The local aboriginal name "eudundacowi" means water from the ground and the town itself was subsequently named after this site.

For many years the waterhole was the town supply and in 1884 it is reported that water was sold at 6d per 100 gallons. A pipe was laid to a standpipe near the hotel. Remains of this can be seen near the waterhole, which was enclosed within a stone tank which also still survives.

With the cutting up of the stock routes for closer development and the eventual laying of a reticulated water supply to the town in c.1923 this and other waterholes in the district became less used.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Mount Rufus was named by Charles Sturt on his voyage of exploration along the River Murray in 1829/30 (an exploration which encouraged the subsequent colonisation of South Australia). Sturt noted that the mountain was the highest point in the ranges west of the Murray.

A decade later, the overlanders, bringing sheep and cattle from the east, used Mt. Rufus as a prominent landmark and it is also featured on Dutton's 1846 map of South Australia.

ITEM NAME: Narcoota Springs
Former or other

Office Use
ITEM No.
DOCKET No.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Narcoota Springs marks the western end of one of the first overland travelling stock tracks across the Murray Flats, which connected the springs with McBean Pound on the River Murray. There were no known sources of water between those points. This route preceded those from Truro to Moorundie and Truro to Blanchetown (which were further south). It is mentioned in 1841 accounts, when the usual staging points after Gawler were Mt. Dispersion (Anlaby), Narcoota Springs, The Pound, then North West Bend.

When the overland route shifted south the Springs declined in importance, but it again became a vital watering place when the Flats were taken up for agricultural settlement after survey in 1866. The track, cut into the banks of the creek, probably dates from the 1860s when farmers brought in their wagons loaded with water-tanks.

The site remains a fenced-off water reserve.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

This whole farm group is of heritage interest in itself, and because it represents the settlement of the Neale's Flat area by German farming families in the late nineteenth century; Neales Flat at that time was more populous than Eudunda, but little evidence remains of that community now. Almost all the farm buildings are well-preserved (the straw-thatched stone and mud sheds still in use for hay storage). The original pug and pine cottage, which probably dates from the 1870s, is very well-preserved, including the hessian remains of the ceiling. Two later mud and stone buildings stand near the cottage as well as a stone tank and the ruins of an underground room. There is also a large, dry dam and what was once a wooden-paling fenced garden.

The site was known as Ziegeler's corner, as the Ziegeler family lived here from 1891 (Ziegeler was also a blacksmith, and walked daily to work at Eudunda).

ITEM NAME: Trinity Lutheran Church Group

DOCKET No.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

After the survey of the Hundred of Neales (on the Murray Flats) in 1866 many German settlers arrived and leased or bought the land. Typically, several small Lutheran Churches were soon constructed; amongst the most substantial of these are the group of three built side by side at Neales Flat. The first was built by members of Pastor Appelt's congregation in 1875 (the centre Church building). It was later named "St. John's" and also "St. John's School and Government School", having been used as a school from 1893 to 1912 and as a Lutheran School, 1875-1917. St. Paul's Lutheran Church was built in 1893, although due to some disagreement, part of the congregation withdrew, worshipping in the old Church, which they named "St. John's". (St. Johannis). A new St. John's Church was built in 1912 (the southern building). The three churches are stone, although the first has been cement rendered. Since amalgamation of the two Lutheran synods in 1966 the congregation combined and is known as "Trinity". There is a cemetery at the rear of the churches, and the whole forms a quite impressive group in a landscape long since depopulated.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

The name, Levi's Waterhole, has been in use since at least 1854: A special small survey marked out about Levi's Waterhole is marked on a government-map of 1854 (Munchenberg). The waterhole is situated on the important north-south stock route, so its period of use probably dates from the over-landing era of the 1840s. A public pound was situated there in 1870.

Philip Levi originally held as much as 2,000 square miles of leasehold run in the area. Levi held pastoral land over a vast area of South Australia from the earliest period of the Colony.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

Soon after German settlers moved to the newly-opened Neales Flat area (see also Trinity Lutheran Church sheet) from the late 1860s, they built the first Lutheran Churches. Members of the Light Pass "Strait Gate" Congregation built their church, "St. Stephans" in 1874 on a block donated by one of the settlers.

The Church is stone with brick pointed arches and elaborate stone finials.

The porch was added in 1924 and the choir loft in 1964 (obtained from the nearby closed Brownlow Church).

ITEM NAME: Former Eudunda Farmers' Store
Former or other

Office Use
ITEM No.
DOCKET No.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE This building comprising shop and residence is probably the rebuilt first branch of Eudunda Farmers' Co-operative Society in S.A. A substantial building it is built of a type of bluestone. The shop front remains largely original although the verandah has been removed.

Eudunda Farmers' trading reflected the gradual changeover in the district in the early 1900s from firewood to wheat, wool and sheep.

Eudunda Farmers' began during the depression of the 1890s. The farmers in this thickly wooded area had difficulty selling their produce, which in any case was very poor from a succession of bad seasons. They began to sell the mallee cleared from their land as firewood. A glut on the Adelaide market, and lowering prices, convinced them that they should market their own wood. On 26 Dec. 1895 they set up the Eudunda Farmers' Co-operative, meeting in the Eudunda Hotel.

Woodyards were opened at Sutherlands and Eudunda, and the first store was established at Sutherlands.

The first shop, bought from Gale & Co. in 1897, was a weather-board store, and also included a weighbridge. It was opened for business in 1897 and was so successful that it is likely the store was rebuilt about the turn of the century, with other stores later being built throughout the State.

These Eudunda Farmers stores now feature prominently in the main streets of most of South Australia's larger country towns.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

This was the first stopping place after the River on the Murray to Eudunda Overland Stock Route in the 1840s and 1850s. Stock could be held against the rising ground, but apparently there was no water nearby. Vic Weis found bottles and matchboxes there and his uncle told him about the route.

The area enclosed by the hundreds of English, Neales and Dutton was first leased in 1851. Lessees included F.H. Dutton, A.J.L. McBean, and Joseph Keynes.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

In 1879 Edwin Davey opened a flour mill on this site. It was almost destroyed by fire in 1919; Laucke rebuilt and opened the flour mill which stands today. The main stone mill building, which is several storeys in height, survived the fire. It is a good example of the steam flour mills, which were once such an important feature in the larger country towns. Many have since been demolished, having become uneconomical with the ready transport of grain to larger central mills. It is one of the few surviving, still in operation, and is situated prominently in the town.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

In 1888 German employees at Eudunda's local foundry formed a recreation and welfare club, apparently on traditional lines. It was called "The Eudunda Unterhaltungs Club Incorporated". The Club completed building its "Century Hall" in 1901, which is of brick and stone construction.

During the anti-German hysteria of the First World War, the Club closed briefly, to re-open as "The Eudunda Club Incorporated", which still exists.

The Eudunda District Council bought the hall in 1916, renaming it the Eudunda District Hall. The building was then used for Council meetings and as Council offices until new offices were opened in 1963.

The hall was enlarged in 1925 in brick, and continues in use for district events.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

This substantial emporium was established in about 1894, the two-storey additions being made c.1909 (showroom). J.G. Wiesner and G.A. Hillbig first established a blacksmith and iron foundry and then the present store. This became a large and successful concern, supplying furniture, builders' hardware ironmongery, guns, fancy goods and superphosphate to town and district.

The Weisner family owned the store until fairly recently, when it was sold to Warners.

The building is a prominent landmark in the town, with an important position in the commercial streetscape.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

John Hannan built the hotel in about 1873. It was the nucleus of the subsequent development of Eudunda and the first meeting place of the District Council of Neales (on 29 August 1878). Hannan was the original owner of much of what is now the township of Eudunda, which was first surveyed in 1872. He subdivided and sold his allotments at auction on 9 June 1877.

Hannan saw the potential for an hotel at the site from observing the successful trade of the wine shop on the site in the late 1860s, run by Henry Watson. Hannan owned the land, so he displaced Watson and built the present hotel, which remains single storeyed.

The rear section, in its largely original form, was once a front entrance.

HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

The shop was opened in April 1874 by a German settler, Mr. F.G.E. Appelt, who possibly built the attached cottage earlier. He was appointed Post Master to the new town of Eudunda, at £6.0.0 per annum. He was also a J.P. This was the first store in the town, and its mainstay for several years. It was a general store, saddlery and possibly wine store. The store serviced local farmers and pastoralists, and some through trade of men and beasts from the Murray lands to Adelaide and Kapunda.

The shop is now used as a roadhouse, but both shop and cottage have retained their original form, with largely intact shopfront. Like the Eudunda Hotel (see separate sheet) they are situated in the old section of Eudunda which was eclipsed by development subsequent to the arrival of the railway.

The new church was opened on 6 August 1893. The pastor was Pastor Drauz. In 1907 a porch was added. In 1943 the interior was renovated; again in 1963.

The building is now used as the meeting room of St. Johns Lutheran School.
