

2014 Regional Snapshot

How many Aboriginal people are involved in NRM?

The protection and management of natural resources have been traditional responsibilities of Aboriginal people for tens of thousands of years. Despite widespread changes to Australia over the last 200 years, healthy natural resources remain critical to the spiritual, social, cultural and economic wellbeing of Aboriginal people.

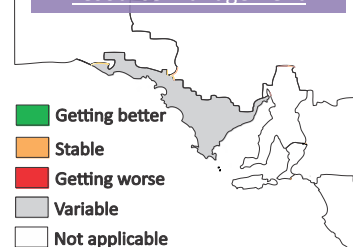

This report tracks Aboriginal involvement in natural resource management through participation in projects, boards, committees, workshops and employment with the Department of Environment, Water and Natural Resources (DEWNR).

The 2011 Australian Bureau of Statistics census indicates that over 2,800 Aboriginal people and Torres Strait Islander peoples (jointly referred to as Aboriginal people in this report) live in the Eyre Peninsula NRM region – about 5 per cent of the population.

In South Australia the unemployment rate of Aboriginal people was about three times higher than for non-Aboriginal people, 2005-11. The Government of South Australia aims to increase Aboriginal employment in all public sector agencies to at least 2 per cent across all levels. DEWNR has an additional target of at least 3 per cent.

Trend in involvement of Aboriginal people in natural resource management

State target

Involve more people in the sustainable management of natural resources

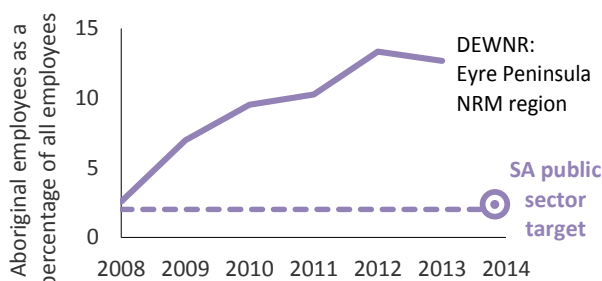

Trend (2008-13)

Variable

In this NRM region, Aboriginal employment is increasing within DEWNR. More information is needed to report trends in Aboriginal participation in NRM.

From 2008-13, DEWNR exceeded the Aboriginal employment targets of 2 per cent (public sector target, graph on right) and 3 per cent (DEWNR target) in the Eyre Peninsula NRM region.

In 2012, 9 Aboriginal people were employed by DEWNR (13 per cent of all staff) in partnership with the Eyre Peninsula NRM Board. The regional Board also funded 9 Aboriginal people as external contractors with full-time (7 people) and part-time (2) employment.

Where we are at (2013)

On Track

Aboriginal employment within DEWNR is 13 per cent in this NRM region. More information is needed to report Aboriginal participation rates in NRM.

The knowledge of Aboriginal people guides nature resource management through their participation in boards, committees and workshops. The Eyre Peninsula NRM Board has 2 members who are Aboriginal people. Five Aboriginal people also participate in co-management boards and committees that manage natural resources.

The collection of information on participation in NRM is not standardised and people's heritage is not always recorded, so the following summaries underestimate actual participation rates. In 2013, 30 Aboriginal people participated in resource management workshops and field days. The region also supports a focus group for Aboriginal people, which initiate resource management programs. In 2013, projects supported by the NRM Board, DEWNR and the Australian Government also helped with improvements at 10 properties managed by Aboriginal people in this NRM region.

The Australian Government's 2009 Invest Action Plan highlights that increasing Aboriginal employment and broader participation in the natural resource management sector requires long-term funding and support, particularly for career-path opportunities.

Reliability of information

Excellent for Aboriginal employment. Participation data are not standardised.

Further information: Technical information for this report, The National agreement to close the gap in Aboriginal disadvantage, and a report on the benefits of Aboriginal engagement in the natural resource management sector