RECOMMENDATION: State

Description:

Coursed tuck-pointed stonework with dressed surrounds, plinth and quoins. Substantial dressed stone parapets. Hanson Street's main parapet has a segmental pediment, corbels and stone finials. Windows of this elevation are arched with moulded sills, keystones and there is a moulded string course. Doors and windows on the left hand end of this elevation have shelf pediments. The Cooke Street elevation is partly dressed stone with windows set under dressed surrounds and have shelf pediments. The door of this elevation has a multi-paned semi-circular fanlight. Behind the Post Office is a more simple residence with random coursed stonework and dressed quoins. This section has a corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and hipped front verandah. The verandah has timber lattice work and the residence has a dressed stone chimney. Double hung sash windows.

Second Post Office in Kingston. Local builders; stone probably quarried at Mount Benson. Built, like the Court House, in preparation for the influx of business from new Hundreds. Part of the centre of business sector in government town (Port Caroline).

Description:

Steel frame with corrugated galvanized iron walled eight roomed house built within the structure, 6.00 metres above the ground. The lighthouse is 33.00 metres high and the structure consists of a large proportion of wrought iron.

Designed in 1867, for the Margaret Brock Reef, after agitation by insurance officers, ship owners and ship masters. Port Caroline had been proclaimed as a port in 1865. Based on a screw pile design with 13 foundation piles (200 mm. dia.), to which the screws were attached, drilled 2.70 metres into the reef. It took thirteen months to drill the piles and it took about three years to complete the lighthouse, which was officially opened in January, 1872. In 1969 it was decided to partly dismantle the lighthouse and after negotiations by the Kingston Branch of the National Trust, the lighthouse was re-erected on its present site in 1975 and was handed over to the National Trust in January, 1976. The base structure and platform remain on the reef.

Description:

Random rubble stonework with arched door on east elevation, adjacent the woolroom. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof with western section pitched almost to ground level, enclosing undercover sheep pens. Circular ventilators at the apex of the roof.

Station established by Andrew Hutchison, son of William, in late 1880's when legislation was such that local pastoralists could build up family estates by putting forward their sons as selectors. Ruin of Hutchison and Dunn in 1893 meant sale to J.F. and T.S. Ryder, who were building their own empire.

Description:

Painted random coursed stonework with dressed quoins. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof. Small porch on front elevation with side door and pointed arched window. Pointed arched windows, along side elevations. Timber eaves brackets under eaves.

Built in government town by local builders on government contract, in expectation of increased need after proclamation of new Hundreds. Local Court established by Act of 1870. Cases hitherto conducted in Circuit Court in hotels, or at District Court at Robe. Court House saw many cases of illegal depasturing of stock, and defaulting on debt; also stock theft, and drunkenness by sailors.

Description:

Painted random rubble (slightly coursed) stonework. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof with concave verandahs. Symmetrical facade with two side wings at the building's rear. Double hung sash windows and two bay windows on the front elevation, either side of the front door. Front door has sidelights and a semicircular fanlight. Verandah has elegant turned verandah posts.

Station founded by Peter MacDonald in 1859. Transferred to John Gall and partner in 1863. Soon sold to Bainton. Gall bought it back as part of holdings including "Tilley's Swamp" and "Marcollat". In hard times he got the mail contract Meningie to Kingston, so from 1882 or 1883 found it convenient to live at "Cantara". He played a large part in civic affairs e.g. was a Chairman of Lacepede District Council.

Description:

White painted random rubble stonework with quoins. Steeply pitched corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof extending into verandahs on the east and west elevations. Servants' quarters building behind the main house. White painted stone walls around the front and rear gardens. Double hung sash windows.

Station founded by George Kendle and Thomas Wood in the 1840's. Then taken up by Donald Gollan. House described by Goyder in 1865 or 1866 as four rooms, stone, separate kitchen and huts. Had a slate roof (c.1875) when sold to Hutchison and Dunn. On their ruin in 1893, station sold to Thomas H. Fraser, who was building holdings 40 miles across. Used for experiments in soil treatment and pasture improvement in 1890's.

Description:

Random rubble stonework with corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof, extending into raked verandahs on two sides of the house. Stone chimney constructed within the wall structure. Casement windows.

Station founded in 1846 by the widow Margaret Hutchison, who had trekked from Victoria with her young family. Named after family home in Scotland. Co-founder may have been Andrew Dunn, whom she married about that time. Her son William Hutchison, in partnership with Dunn, built up 'one of the biggest combinations ever connected with the pastoral interests of the south-east.' (R. Cockburn). Four of her daughters married South East pastoralists.

'Although the occupation licences carried the right to build on Crown lands, only Margaret Hutchison built a permanent house in the beginning. She had a large family to shelter.' (M. Dunn).

Mrs. Hutchison lived at "Woolmit" till her death in 1878. Hutchison and Dunn were ruined by the depression in 1893.

Description:

Painted random rubble stonework with corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof extending into raked verandahs on front and side elevations. Brick and stone chimneys. Multi-paned casement windows on front and side elevations.

H.C. Talbot gave James Brown the credit of founding "Tilley's Swamp" for which the lease was issued in 1859. John Gall bought it from James Foot and, after living with his wife in a wattle and daub hut, built a new homestead in 1866. He held the adjacent "Cantara" and "Marcollat" runs 300 square miles in all, concentrating at "Tilley's Swamp" on sheep. From 1883 he lived at "Cantara". Lease still in the hands of Gall family in 1920's.

Description:

Painted random rubble stonework with stone lean-to at rear. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and bull nose verandah. Symmetrical front elevation with raised verandah and floor level. Double hung sash windows with stone sills. Stone outbuilding used as garage.

The "Avenue Range" run, also called "Kalyra" or "Keilira", was taken up in 1849 by James Brown, notorious for tales of his murder of Aborigines. The first homestead, with a thatched roof, was extant in 1968. The second, of stone with 10 rooms and a verandah, was built after Brown obtained some security of tenure by purchasing a block from the Government. Brown still held "Keilira", with neighbouring "Blackford", in the late 1880's. The existing house was built by Kelly c.1900.

Painted random rubble stonework with two storey verandah on front elevation. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof with raked verandah. First floor balcony partly enclosed. Double hung sash windows with a variety of sizes and sill heights. Built in several sections using both single storey and two storey construction.

Begun in the 1860's, the hotel 'was the Kingston terminus of the Adelaide to Port MacDonnell coach service and a convenient place of call for the teamsters who brought the wool from the outback stations to the Cooke's stores on the opposite side of the road.' (M. Dunn). Used at this time by circuit judge, J.P., and visiting government officials meeting deputations. Early 1880's : improved and extended to accommodate tourists and businessmen in a time of prosperity. People stayed overnight in Kingston to connect with passenger ships, railway or mail coach. Advertised in 1883 as 'the largest and most convenient hotel in Kingston, being nearest the railway and jetty'.

Description:

Random rubble stonework with corrugated galvanized iron cladding to south elevation. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof. High level semi-circular windows along side elevation. Timber weatherboard entrance porch on one end with a random rubble stone lean-to on the other end. Two stone chimneys.

An Institute committee was formed by 1867, with a library and reading room in the schoolhouse. Need was felt for an Institute building, for public meetings and dancing, and as 'essential to set the seal of worth upon the town.' (M. Dunn). The minority keen for such a building - squatters, commercial men, professionals - raised money by entertainments such as concerts, plays and debates. Town praised for its public speakers. Building completed by 1878. Had 'a beautiful stage with a drop curtain depicting a scene of the River Danube. On either side of the stage were large columns and two figures portraying commerce and music, while on the sounding board at the top of the proscenium was the figure of Hope.' (M. Dunn).

The inhabitants of the area felt that the Albert District Roads Board was neglecting them, and James Cooke petitioned for a District Council in 1872. The next year the District Council of Lacepede was proclaimed. In the early 1880's 'the increase in the population stimulated the development of a greater sense of pride in the town and more efforts were made to improve its appearance.' (M. Dunn). Early Chairmen of the Council included pastoralists Robert Redman and John Gall, and J.J. Jarman. The third Clerk, Charles Crump, held the post so long that his name 'became a household word' (M. Dunn).

RECOMMENDATION: Local

Description:

Large timber trussed corrugated iron shed with louvred windows and ridge ventilator.

'The Mount Benson and Cape Jaffa district was the natural habitat of the Black Wattle ... The bark of the tree yields a high percentage of tannin extract for the leather tanning industry ...' (K. Bermingham). Wattle trees were deliberately cultivated in the region when there was an export trade to Europe. Mills were established at Kingston and at Noolook; the latter was run by Paltridges, who also had a mill at Yankalilla. They closed early this century. The Noolook Mill became a shearing shed, but it still contains relics of its former use: a weighbridge, bagging apparatus, an elevator and a grinder.

Description:

Original building of random rubble, wattle and daub, exposed hand-adzed structural timbers, windows are presently holes in walls, ceiling and some walls lined with bituminous paper. Massive chimney/fireplace with stove. Timber-framed addition (now main house) at front.

'Closer settlement was achieved after the Lands Re-purchasing Bill of 1897 ... In 1897 for example, the "Mount Benson" Station was subdivided into smaller blocks on perpetual lease and a new community of selectors settled there.' (M. Dunn). Scott and Holmes came down together from Langhorne's Creek, Scott to build here and Holmes at "Cadara". The timber addition dates from 1938.

Description:

White painted random rubble stonework with flat sheet galvanized iron gable ended roof. Main roof extends into the verandah and has a timber tracery fascia board. Double hung sash windows along front facade with low sills (used to be French doors). Central French door with "M" above the door. Casement windows at the rear. Stone chimney part of wall structure. Symmetrical front elevation. Asbestos cement addition at rear of building.

Station founded in 1847 or before by John Hindmarsh and Henry Morris. They were joined by Thomas Morris, who took over in 1850 or 1851. Homestead built in fashionable U-plan. Government regulations encouraged Thomas Morris to sell the station in 1875 to the Hutchison and Dunn empire.
