Description:

Random coursed sandstone with limestone quoins and surrounds. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and single storey return verandah. Three storey tower over main entrance - random coursed sandstone and limestone quoins and surrounds. The house is divided into the main house with the servants' quarters attached to the south elevation. The verandah is raised and has Mclean's patent columns and elegant lacework. Surrounding the main entrance, under the tower, is ornamental masonry, consisting of pilasters, bases, capitals, and brackets. This entrance is reached by a flight of slate steps. On the left hand side of the tower is an elegant bay window. The interior has several marble fireplaces and the main entrance vestibule has a multi-coloured tiled floor. The staircase is freestanding. Struan House has an Italianate style, using the three orders of Greek architecture, Doric; Ionic; and Corinthian.

The two storey house was built by John Robertson and was opened by a grand ball on January 27th., 1876. It was estimated to cost 10,000 pounds. Motivation for its magnificence is said to have included a determination to outrival all other homesteads in the region.

Description:

Random coursed stonework with corrugated galvanized iron sweeping hipped roof extending into a verandah. Raised verandah has scalloped timber eaves. Multi-paned double hung sash windows either side of arched front door. Basement rooms entered from outside. Simple and elegant 'farmhouse' of Colonial Georgian proportions, with influences from Eastern states of Australia.

Built by John Robertson to replace the first 'hut' he lived in, upon his marriage to Susan Frazer and the coming of his family.

Description:

Painted random coursed limestone walls with dressed quoins. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof with protruding attic room. Double hung sash windows. Timber extension at rear of building. Three storey building of Georgian proportions.

Built for David Simpson and 'still the only three-storeyed building in the town.' (J. Murdoch and H. Parker). Endured commercial vicissitudes till 1888 when bought by J. & G. Thomson. Business was good in later years, and grain would be brought from as far away as Robe, Kingston and Geroke (Vic.). J. Thomson also had a mill at Wolseley by 1909. The Naracoorte mill ceased business in the 1930's.

Description:

Random coursed sandstone with dressed quoins and string course. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and single storey hipped concave verandah. In 1965 the Public Buildings Department replaced black slates on main roof with iron. Double hung sash windows. Rear verandah partly built in with asbestos cement lightweight construction. Attractive simple garden surrounded by hedges.

James Affleck came from Victoria in the 1850's and built the house in about 1861. Upon his death in 1875, the property transferred to George Harris and then transferred to Richard Kiddle in 1890. In 1905 the State Government bought the property for closer settlement. The house is at present unoccupied and is part of the Kybybolite Research Station, which has gained an international reputation for the quality of its work in pasture improvement, especially by the use of superphosphate.

Description:

Random coursed limestone with elaborate dressed quoins, surrounds and parapet. Rock faced plinth. Detailed decorative stonework 'capitals' below parapet frieze. Elegant screen arched screen door to main entrance foyer/porch. Stone plumes above parapet. Double hung sash windows, some with semicircular fanlights. Intricate wrought iron front fence. Classical building with symmetrical front elevation.

Built in 1884 for the Commercial Bank of South Australia, to be used as a bank and residence. Soon went out of business. Bought as a private home by Park Laurie, who named it 'Winderar'. Passed to Lucas De Garis, and then the Council bought it from his family in 1964.

Description:

The first chamber of the Blanche Cave was used by Aborigines and the cave is taken to have become known to Europeans in 1849. It soon became a tourist attraction, and the first chamber a venue for public events such as picnics. The Cave was also celebrated for the discovery of the 'petrified blackfellow', soon stolen. Blanche Cave's use till recently as a community hall is evident in the surviving wooden furniture.

William Reddan, caretaker of the Caves Reserve, discovered the Victoria and Alexandra Caves, in 1894 and 1908 respectively. In 1969 the Victoria revealed an extension with a huge fossil deposit of world importance.

Description:

Random coursed stonework with sandstone quoins. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and hipped two storey verandah. Extensive single storey additions to rear of two storey section. Pressed metal two storey lift well adjacent to northern end of verandah. The stonework of the house is painted white with yellow and green painted woodwork. Three weatherboard cottages within the back garden precincts, one with stone chimney.

The station was founded by Alexander Stewart, but would seem to have been named by its second owner William MacIntosh, after the seat of the MacIntoshs in Scotland. In 1860 it was bought by William Robertson, a close relative of the "Struan" Robertsons. The two properties were renowned for their social and sporting activities. The homestead was built of sandstone from a quarry on the northern side of Naracoorte, and soon after its opening in 1867, allegedly saw Australia's first coursing event. The station was once described as 'the best station, for its size, north of Mount Gambier.' (R. Cockburn). On William Robertson's death in 1897, "Moy Hall" passed to Miss Annie Robertson, for whom the lift well was installed when she was elderly and infirm.

Description:

Painted random coursed limestone (front elevation) with dressed quoins and surrounds. Quoins stepped around openings. Ground floor opening have semicircular openings, whilst first floor are square headed. Windows on ground floor are bi-partite and doors have semicircular fanlights. First floor have double hung sash windows. Parapet wall has Italianate balusters. Corrugated galvanized roof behind parapet. Triangular pediment along parapet above main entrance. Small porch with stone overhanging parapet wall above secondary entrance.

The Foundation Stone of the Institute was laid in 1876 by John Robertson, of Struan, and the first part of the building (ground floor reading room and library) was opened in the same year. A few months later, the first floor Hall was opened. The cost of the project was 1,500 pounds, of which 500 pounds was a Government subsidy. In 1878 a stage was built in the Hall and in 1897 an earthquake caused the ceiling and parapet to collapse. In 1913-14 a new hall was built on the land adjacent to the western side of the building.

Description:

Random coursed stonework with stone quoins and dressed surrounds. Steeply pitched slate roof. Flat sheet iron clad spire (30.00 metres high). Pointed arched Gothic stained glass windows. Entrance porch has red dolomite columns. Small buttresses top spire and east elevation. Typical Gothic style church with Gothic detailing top windows and doors.

Known at first, like its predecessor of 1858, as 'The Kirk'. Benefitted much from the generosity of the Robertsons. Building restored in the mid-1950's, after the steeple had been condemned.

Old section of random coursed rubble with renewed metal framed windows and timber framed doorway., with sidelights and fanlight. Newer section is more elaborate with hexagonal bay windows, double curved corrugated iron verandah roof with cast iron lacework between corbelled timber posts. Stone corbels to corners and stucco surrounds to doors and windows.

"Wrattonbully" was allied to "Struan". Some time after the death of John Robertson in 1880, the estate was divided among his children, "Wrattonbully" going to his third son James, who held it till 1927. The front, and later, part of the homestead, had '1896' written over a door.

Description:

Random coursed sandstone with undressed stone quoins. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof and concave verandah along the west elevation. Verandah is supported on timber colomuns with lacework. Adjacent to main entrance verandah has a shallow gable with finial. The west elevation was symmetrical before additions were added to the northern end (Besser block wing) and southern end. Main roof gables have pediment above verandah roof line, coinciding with the windows and pediment above front door. Double hung sash windows. Dressed stone chimneys.

In 1877 the State Government presented a 20 acre (8.00 hectare) site and 500 pounds to subsidize the building of a hospital in Naracoorte. A prize was offered for the best architectural design and this was won by H. Trenter. The Foundation Stone was laid by Mrs. John Robertson on February 16th., 1878 and by April 1st., 1879 the building was completed but remained empty for two years until an accident ward was established. There have been a whole complex of buildings added to the site over the years.

The District Council of Naracoorte was proclaimed in 1870. Meetings were held in William MacIntosh's office, and then in the Institute. Council Chambers were built in 1884, in a time of prosperity. The Chamber 'although reduced in size by later alterations, was a gracious and lovely room' (J. Murdoch and H. Parker). In 1957-58 extensions were made.

"Binnum" Station was part of the holdings, on both sides of the border, of the 'swell squatter' Henry Jones and his brother Derwas. They reached the area about 1844, and later prospered by selling stock to the Ballarat diggings. Henry married in the 1850's the cultivated Frances. 'He lavished every luxury upon [her] ... She had a new home, built from bricks made from swamp clay of the property [an unsuitable material], the timber also being sawn on the place. Both the interior and exterior were finished in imported cedar.' (J. Murdoch and H. Parker) "Binnum" was known throughout South Australia and Victoria for its hospitality. Henry succumbed to his debts in the mid-1870's and lost the property.

Description:

Random coursed stonework with vermiculated quoins. Corrugated galvanized iron hipped roof and hipped return verandah. Intricate and elegant lacework to verandah. Large bay windows to drawing room and dining room. Double hung sash windows and dressed stone chimneys. Front part of the house is basically divided into a wide entrance hall and two large rooms (drawing room and dining room) running perpendicular to each other. The rear section of the house is of much simpler design. Behind the house is the maids' quarters - a simple random rubble stone building with a corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof extending into a raked verandah and casement windows.

"Morambro" was taken up by Sanders and Pepperel in 1845 and by the early 1870's the lease was held by the Olivers. The property was sold in 1876 to Hutchison and Dunn, when it consisted of 29,000 acres (11,750 hectares) of freehold land, and 97,000 acres (39,250 hectares) of leasehold land. In 1903 the 'Morambro Syndicate' from Millicent made a huge profit speculating in the Station's land. The larger, and later, part of the homestead was perhaps built in 1905.

Description:

Painted random coursed stonework with white painted quoins to windows. Corrugated galvanized iron gable ended roof and raked two storey veranda with small gables. First floor balcony on front elevation has iron balustrading. Double hung sash windows and dressed stone chimneys. Built in several sections.

Original licence granted in 1850 under the name of the "Merino Inn", with William MacIntosh as landlord till 1854. Following a succession of landlords, the hotel/inn was empty from 1864 to 1868, when Mrs. MacDonald took it over and renamed the hotel/inn the 'Naracoorte Hotel'. At about this time several additions were built, including a two storey section at the rear and assembly rooms. The front portion of the hotel was rebuilt in the 1880's, under the ownership of Fred Harris, and in 1904 the second storey was added to the front elevation.

Description:

Random coursed stonework with corrugated galvanized iron gable ended and hipped roof, extending into a hipped verandah. French doors open onto a raised verandah. Stone cottage incorporated and attached to main building. Cottage has timber shingles under its iron roof. Stone half cellar in garden.

Run taken up in 1846 after Thomas Seymour's pioneering crossing of the Ninety Mile Desert with R.H. Rhodes. Thomas soon joined by his brothers and father Henry. "Killanoola" suffered from flooding. Henry added to his holdings "Mount Benson" Station, which had the problem of 'coast disease'; by alternating stock between the holdings the Seymours maintained their flocks and herds. Much of "Killanoola" was taken by T.S. Ryder in the 1890's, but the homestead portion remained with the Seymour family until recently. The cottage of 1847 survives, with a house from the turn of the century.

In 1842 George Ormerod took up the "Naracoorte Run" and built a hut on the banks of the Naracoorte Creek. A portion of the property was sold to William MacIntosh in 1845, who then established the town of Kincaig. By the mid 1850's Ormerod sold the remainder of the land to MacIntosh and in about 1862 it was sold to Thomas Magarey. Magarey built the present homestead.

Gabled corrugated iron roof with timber finials.

'A vote was taken to see which denomination could provide a majority in terms of adherents and financial backing for obtaining a permanent minister. The Presbyterians, numbering in their ranks most of the landholders, had the majority [over the Anglicans]' (J. Murdoch & H. Parker). Thus it came about that Naracoorte's first church building was Presbyterian. William MacIntosh had given the land. It became a Sunday School after the much larger church of 1874 was built. The church of 185 is itself incorporated into the additions of 1905, 1928 and 1963.

Description:

Approximate Area of Conservation Park - 339 hectares.

Date of Establishment - 1980.

The Mary Seymour Conservation Park consists of two areas; low lying scrubland and forested undulating ranges. The low lying areas, which are subject to inundation, are covered with Prickly Tea-tree (Melaleuca neglecta), Silver Banksia and Needlebush (Hakea nodosa), whilst the range areas have Brown Stringybark and Pink Gum, with an understorey of Bracken and Yacca. The park has an area of swamp which is surrounded by River Red Gum, South Australian Blue Gum and Pink Gum. Within this are twenty nine varieties of waterbirds have been recorded, of which 22 are known to use the area for breeding. These include the Brolga, three species of Rails, the Australasian Bittern and the Whiskered Tern. This use of the park for breeding by waterbirds makes it the third most important wetland area in the South East.

Description:

Approximate Area of Game Reserve - 2,690 hectares.

Date of Establishment - 1967.

This Game Reserve together with the Hacks Lagoon Conservation Park constitute the largest area of swampland in the South East. The area is covered by a series of saucer-shaped lakes, which are bounded by high banks, called lunettes. The vegetation that exists in this open swampland includes areas of Water Ribbons, Reeds and Bullrushes, with an area of Saltwater Paperbark. This area also regulates the flow of floodwaters down the Mosquito Creek, with the construction of inlet and outlet drains. The lagoons of this area are designed to be a drought refuge for waterbirds in south-eastern Australia and are now the only area where large numbers of Brolgas can be seen. Within the area seventy-five species of waterbirds have been recorded, of which 63% use the area for breeding and in good years 10,000 Ibis breed in the Paperbark area. The Bool Lagoon Game Reserve is also used for duck shooting and conflicts have occurred between the duck shooters and the conservation requirements of the Game Reserve.

The Naracoorte Caves Conservation Park covers an area containing 16 of about 60 known caves in the Cave Range, which extends some 25 km. The major caves include the Blanche Cave, the Victoria Cave, the Alexandra Cave, the Bat Cave and the Cable Cave. The park is covered by extensive areas of natural vegetation, including an open scrubland of Dryland Tea-tree, an open forest of Brown Stringybark and a River Red Gum woodland along the path of the Mosquito Creek. The fauna of the park includes populations of the Sugar Glider (Petaurus breviceps), the Forest Raven (Corvus tasmanicus) and the Brush-tailed Phascogale (Phascogale tapoatafa). This last mammal is know very rare in South Australia. Refer also to : NAR:008:105.
